THE CROAKER

[Original.] Hans and Katrina Shaeffer were a young couple who had come to Amerion from Germany and settled on a farm in the west. They were baving n hard time of it, for they had no money with which to stock their farm, when a son was born to them. The father did not welcome the little stranger, giving as an excuse that he saw nothing ahead for the boy but a life of poverty, and poverty meant slavery. Not so Katrina. A mother is too absorbed in her child to worry about its future. She contented herself with the care of little Peter, as he was named, trusting to his own strength when he became a man to bring him comfort. The father never got over croaking, as the mother called it, about Peter's future, and when the boy was old enough to play with little Gretchen Becker, the daughter of George Becker, who occupied the adjoining farm, er, who occupied the adjoining farm, Hans said: "See, there is more misery coming. By and by they will marry and bring more children into the world to suffer." This constant foreboding hung like a dark cloud over Katrina's life. It tended to draw her nearer to her son and estrange her from her hushand. The mother gets the greater part of a child's affections, and little Peter showed his preference for his mother from the first. This was natural. Peter had been told that if he left his father's farm he would be employed on Becker's farm, but could only expect the wages of an ordinary hand and that only when the crops were being gathered. Peter bad saved enough to carry him and wife through the first winter. He wanted to ask his father if he could continue to work for him, but dreaded to speak of the matter.

However, the wedding day came round. The two families were sitting at the wedding supper when Hans rose and said:

"Katrina, now I show you where I have been going nights."

Followed by the party, he went out, taking a lantern with him, and across to the barn, where he stopped for a spade. Then he went on to a corner of his land farthest from the road and occupied by a clump of trees. In the center of this thicket he began to dig and soon unearthed an old trough with a cover on it. Taking up the trough, he carried it to the house and marned it over on the table. Out rolled a promiscuous heap of coins all the way from cents to gold double eagles and bills from one dollar to a hundred. "Here, my boy," said Hans, "is your wedding gift, which I have been saving for more than twenty years. If I hadn't done it my way, I couldn't have done it at all. There is enough to buy you a farm, put a house on it and E. M. Lyon, stock it well."

The finest contour of a female face, the sweetest smile of a female mouth, loses something if the head is crowned with Scant and falling hair, it is now known, is caused by a parasite that burrows into the scalp to the root of the hair, where it saps the vitality. The little white scales the germ throws up in burrowing are called dandruff. To cure dandruff permanently, then, and to stop falling hair, that germ must be killed. Newbro's Herpfolde, an entirely new re-suit of the chemical laboratory, destroys the dandruff germ, and, of course, stops the falling bafr, and prevents baldness. Sold by leading druggists.
